RENEWED TESTIMONY

No one in Norway suffers head-aches or distressing urinary ills, can afford to ignore this Norway woman's twice-told story. It is confirmed testimony that no Norway resident can doubt.

Mrs. Myrtle Payne, 237 Main St. Norway, says: "I used Doan's Pills and am thoroughly satisfied they are a dependable kidney remedy. I had more or less pain across my back and kidneys which annoyed me when stooping or lifting. I found Doan's Pills good for the trouble and after I used this remedy the pains lessened. I have been practically free from the trouble since taking Doan's and feel they deserve my recommendation. (Statement given June 7, 1916.)

On September 3, 1920 Mrs. Payne said: "The statement I made holds good. I recommend Doan's as highly today as I have during the past. The good they did me has lasted."

KEEPING TABS ON BIRDS

The returns show that since July 1, 1923, more than twelve thousand migratory birds have been banded by the United States Department of Agriculture through the Biological Survey and voluntary helpers in the good work. The large increase in the number of bands used, amounting to more than one thousand per week during two of the least active months for this particular work, is taken to indicate a rapidly increasing interest in the study of the habits of our migratory birds. The Biological Survey reports that during the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1923, more than twenty-five thousand birds were banded. This is more than four times as many as were banded in the preceding fiscal year.

Up to the present time about twelve hundred returns from banded birds have been received at headquarters. The Biological Survey officials consider this a very encouraging percentage. The greatest activity in banding is reported from the upper Mississippi valley, on the Pacific and north Atlantic coasts and in the Great Lakes region before the game and song birds take flight southward. At seven stations duck are banded exclusively. Up to September 22, 1923, eight hundred and fifty permits for banding work had been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

It has been explained by the officials having charge of this work that returns from banded birds are expected to throw light on such questions as how fast, how far and how long individual migratory birds fly on their trips, whether or not one flock leads all others continuously, or whether flocks pass over one another in alternate periods of rest and flight; whether the same routes are always followed, with the same stop-overs for feeding; the relation between the breeding and the wintering grounds; where the birds go that do not return to the vicinity of their original nests, and how long birds live. For the voluntary worker this is mostly or altogether a labor of love, but results are expected to add largely to our knowledge of birds and their habits.

THE SUPERSTITIOUS WORLD

This is the time of year when the goosebone prophets announce what kind of winter is in store for the country. The date of fur on fur-bearing animals, the size of the hoards of nuts laid by squirrels, the date when cockle burr withers, the structure of muskrat houses, are some of the signs trusted by ignorant forecasters to determine the length and severity of the cold season.

In all of these theories of weather determination, one can detect an underlying belief that nature imparts to the lower animals and even to plants, some sort of provision that is denied to the lords of creation. The chipmunk with his cheeks full of beechnuts is believed to know more than any man about what weather the future has in store. Where the knowledge comes from, or what it is like, does not trouble these true believers in unscientific weather wisdom. It is simply true that the birds make an early journey south when the winter is to come early, and that all there is to it.

In vain does the naturalist insist that patient comparison of weather records with recorded facts of animal behavior fails to reveal any correspondence as that which the weather prophets believe in. They believe it and that settles it.

Perhaps someone will say that they do not believe it and that statements to the contrary are mere newspaper humor, but even a little serious investigation will reveal the fact that these weather superstitions and many others like them are the accepted philosophy of thousands of Americans.

The fact is, that the world has not yet outgrown the kind of thinking that made astrology, demonism and animism that sort of thing out of the greater part of the field where it is of serious import in the world's affairs, but there is still abundant soil in which a new crop of witchburners could be raised and alchemy is only just around the corner.

NORWAY SAVINGS BANK,
By G. L. Curtis, Treas.
Norway, Me., Jan. 8, 1924.

What's the use of building great highway systems, "at an expense of millions and millions of dollars, when in a few short years all the freight and passenger traffic will be carried in the air?"

The question is always being asked by some one, usually some one who is unendowed by nature with faculty of thinking straight, but sometimes by those who think, but without data on which to go.

The next ten, or the next hundred years, will see enormous strides made in aviation. Mail, some express, some passenger traffic will go via airplane, and much sport and travel will use it. But no further development of aeronautics can overcome the fundamental fact of nature, that to raise a weight in the air and maintain it there, requires power and that power is an equivalent for value; in our terms money.

Therefore, no matter how desirable otherwise, no system of transportation which requires an expenditure to support a weight, can compete in cheapness with those in which the weight is borne by the earth.

There will always be railroads, always be vessels on the water, always be roads and road vehicles. They will change, improve, become more economical, more speedy, more safe, but the earth will continue to carry the bulk of the traffic, simply and solely because it doesn't charge anything for holding up the weight, whereas nature makes us pay, and heavily to hold the weight up in the air, while we transport it.

Those who build roads to-day will not live to see the time when their roads are not used. Those who bond themselves for roads to-day will never see the day when those roads are outstanding against disused highways. The airways will be increasingly used, but not for freight!

How Maintenance of Roads Should be Paid

"Tax the automobile and build the road from the revenues," is a principle which has been expressed by the non-informed voter too many times. But education and sound economics as enunciated by bankers and statesmen has changed the cry. Few now concern themselves with road financing, but who understand that the right way to pay for a road is either by road bonds based on general, not specific taxation, or from current general funds.

The experience of years proves that the fees from taxed road vehicles must be spent for maintenance. Maintenance is always being used up; vehicle taxes are always coming up to provide that maintenance. To use the maintenance fund for building more roads is as un-economic as the procedure of the man who builds a house for rent, and instead of using some of the rent to keep his property in condition, and insure it and paint it, spends it for another house, letting the first one go to ruin. He will end in the poorhouse, and the county or State which does not provide a maintenance fund for road upkeep will be bankrupt in good roads long before the roads are paid for.

It is gradually coming to be recognized that snow removal is a legitimate maintenance charge. All highways which can be used but six months of the twelve cost twice their price. To get the use of an expensive highway for three or four or six months of snow time, by the expenditure of a small amount of a maintenance fund, is only sound, common sense.

THE JOHN DEERE SPREADER

The Spreader with the Beater on the Axle

The main axle of the John Deere Spreader serves a two-fold purpose, that of an axle for the spreader and a shaft for the beater. All the strain and stress of spreading comes where it belongs, on the main axle, the strongest part of the machine, not on the spreader frame and box sides. The axle runs in self-aligning boxes. It can not bind or get out of true. The draft is lightened and wear is reduced.

The box is wide and low—only 36 inches to the top of the box.

The load is carried on all four wheels.

The load is delivered near the ground, wind does not affect spreading.

High Drive Wheels lighten the draft and furnish extra traction.

Easy to load at back end, over the beater, if necessary.

Turns in its own length. Very easy on repairs.

Miss Hobbs in Virginia

The first of the week Mrs. E. A. Cox received a letter from her sister, Miss Annie Hobbs, who recently went to Lower Pocassan Mission, McMullen Green Co., Virginia, telling of her safe arrival in that place. Miss Hobbs left Boston Tuesday evening of Jan. 1, arriving in Washington on Wednesday morning. From there she went to Charlottesville, stopping over night in that place, then on to Barboursville. Here she left the railway and was obliged to ride eighteen miles with the mail carrier who stopped at two post offices and several times on the mail route. During this ride of eighteen miles to Standardsville, it rained continually. Here she was met by a Miss Edwards, a co-worker in the mission, with a mule and they journeyed for eight miles over roads so poor that it was impossible to proceed faster than a walk. They forded streams where the water came nearly to the hubs of the wheels, then up the mountain where the mud collected in cakes on the wheels and the road was so narrow that only one team could travel it, with only occasional turn outs, and this only 120 miles from Washington. Three miles from where Miss Hobbs is located, at Upper Pocassan, is a Miss Knight, whose people are from South Paris. Some of the people have reached mature life and never heard a preacher. Some have already come to see the "new arrival," as Miss Hobbs expresses it, and close by stating she is having experiences.

PORTER'S SHOE STORE SUFFERED DAMAGE

Porter's Shoe Store in the McManis block, Congress street, was damaged to the amount of $400 during a fire Saturday evening. The blaze was confined to the basement of the Porter store with no damage to other stores or tenements in the block.

According to Manager E. K. Moore, some stock was carried in the basement and this was ruined. The greater part of the merchandise was on the first floor and escaped loss. Origin of the fire is unknown but is thought to have started in the furnace pipes.

This store was organized and conducted several years by Randall O. Porter formerly of Norway and since his death has been carried on by Mr. Moore under the same name.

UNCLE LEM'S SAYINGS

Several important events have taken place during the first ten days of the New Year. The Bok peace plan has been given to the public, but the author's name is withheld, probably because he is one of the ring that originated the scheme. A great effort is now being made to force it upon the Senate and the country. Though, as it is claimed, there may be millions and subsidized journals pushing it, it won't succeed. Already this concerted effort to force its adoption has met with strong opposition, and enough senators have declared against the scheme to defeat it. The Bok plan is not practicable. Contrast it with the Maine Grange plan, which could awaken no serious opposition from any quarter. This plan in short is for conferences of the representatives of the nations of the civilized world to meet annually on Armistice Day at one of the capital cities to consider measures for the promotion of permanent world peace—the U. S. to be called by the President of the U. S. at Washington, D. C. What plan could be more simple or workable and less likely to meet with opposition? One has only to read what William Penn accomplished for permanent peace in 240 years ago and what President Harding brought about in the Disarmament Conference to be greatly impressed by what great good might be done by conferences under the Grange plan. A person who had President Harding's confidence has mind to call such a conference. Some time it will be adopted. The Bok plan under present conditions will fail. It requires no prophet to foretell this.

The bonus bill has been side-tracked in the House of Representatives, and the tax reduction measure given the right of way. Score one for Calvin.

The leaders of the warring factions in Indiana have come out for Coolidge. It begins to look mighty squally for Hiram Johnson.

The "balky mule" from Wisconsin, has kicked over the traces and upset his basket of provender. He can now form a party of his own—of impracticables and counting after the November election.

If conditions had been different and Western man taken this year for President, no one would stand a better sight for the Vice-Presidency than Maine's useful and popular Senator, Bert M. Fernald. It will not be too late however in 1928, and he will lose nothing by waiting.

Small-bore politicians down near the "Blue-nose" border might profitably place this in their head gear.

We have already heard from several would-be governors of Maine. One concludes from what Mayor Day of Bangor says that he would be willing to be guided by the wire-pullers of the party and the bosses of the legislature—"Clay in the hands of the potter."

Senator Brewster and the "Black Eagle" of the Kennebec have been having a political boxing bout without gloves. Why not invite them to a "set" in Norway hall. It would be the biggest event of the year in Maine.

GOOD PRODUCER AT EASTMAN FARM

Eastman Alartha Canary De Kol, a Holstein cow in the herd of R. M. Eastman of Lovell, recently completed an extraordinary record for the production of butter. According to the advanced registry office of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, this cow in seven consecutive days produced 49.7 pounds of milk containing 18.053 pounds of butterfat equal to 22.56 pounds butter and in 14 days she produced 94.60 pounds of milk containing 34.239 pounds of butterfat equal to 42.79 pounds butter, at the age of three years.

The advanced registry system of the National Holstein Association was started 38 years ago and has constantly grown in importance. This system is absolutely essential to successful breeding operations in purebreds and is providing the main factor in increasing the productive capacity of all dairy cows.

Dairymen are recognizing the superior value of a purebred bull to increase the production of their herds and are selecting those which show advanced registry breeding.

JUDGE WHITMAN TELLS OF SCENES BEHIND THE SCENES IN MAINE COURT ROOM

By Harry A. Packard, in Sunday Press Herald

"Judge Dalton was holding court that session and Uncle Cleave Parker had been indicted for selling liquor. Uncle Cleave was by no means a bad citizen; he was queer but had amassed some property and quite a few good deeds could be traced to his door. He was what you might call a fairly good citizen and his arrest and indictment had been a pretty punishment to him already. These names as well as that of Attorney Wringle, who was attending court that session are all fictitious. The story itself is true.

"Uncle Cleave had been out on bail but he appeared at court the day it opened. He had gotten in wrong with the law but he seemed determined now to do all within his power to make things right; yet there was little chance that he would not be convicted. He was sitting hunched up in his chair when Judge Dalton approached him. Laying his hand on the old man's shoulder the Judge said: 'Who is your attorney, Uncle Cleave?'

"Haven't any and I dunno as I want any.' The old fellow was discouraged. The Judge turned to the attorney Wringle and said: 'The court appoints you, Lawyer Wringle, at the county's expense to free this man.'

"I do not feel like handling the case, your honor," the lawyer replied. "I know nothing of the matter and would not be able to build up a satisfactory defense so quickly." The Judge, however, was insistent. "Take Uncle Cleave you the whole story. In the meantime I will try to build up a satisfactory defense." Uncle Cleave and the lawyer retired to the library.

"The first thing we must have understood," began the lawyer, "is that you must be absolutely frank with me. We have no time to mince matters. Are you guilty or not?" Uncle Cleave was frank if nothing more. He looked the lawyer straight in the eye and without finching said: 'Guilty as Hell, Mr. Lawyer.'

"Attorney Wringle advanced to the window and motioned for Uncle Cleave to look out across the wonderful Oxford County hills. 'What range of white is that in the westward?' the lawyer asked. 'The White Mountains,' Uncle Cleave answered. 'Do you know where they are located?' 'Yes sir, in New Hampshire.'

'My advice to you then,' said Lawyer Wringle, 'is to place yourself behind those mountains just as quick as the Lord will let you.' Along in the middle of the afternoon Lawyer Wringle walked leisurely into the court room and took his place among the lawyers sitting before the bench. The case on trial being disposed of Judge Dalton addressed Lawyer Wringle: 'We will now proceed with your case, Mr. Wringle. There is your Prisoner?'

Lawyer Wringle bowed himself up a great height and with very dramatic seriousness said: 'He has left his country for his country's good.'

It was Judge Charles P. Whitman of Norway, who for more than 55 years has been a member of the Oxford Co. bar, who told this story. He has a few such stories when wit and wisdom was not lacking in the court session of Maine. It was way back in September 1868, when he was not quite 21 years of age, that he was admitted to the bar. He was also originator of the Norway Public Library and solicited the first subscription for buying books. Through his efforts the Norway Municipal Court was established in 1885 and he was appointed its first judge, a position which he filled ten years. He left this position when appointed Clerk of Courts. He had this latter position 20 years.

"Many things happened in the old days," declared Judge Whitman recently, to testify in a liquor case. He talked directly to the lawyers, answering his questions carefully but paying little or no attention to the jury to whom he was supposed to be giving his testimony. At times they had difficulty in hearing Small's answers. The Judge was exasperated at the calm manner of some witnesses who seemed to be perfectly calm and unembarrassed but ignored the jury.

"Mr. Witness," said the Judge sternly, 'will you kindly address the jury.' With-out a smile or the quivering of an eyebrow the witness turned to the judge and inquired in a demure manner: 'Upon what subject, your Honor?'

"One lawyer we will call White used to look up to a man we will name Nat Littleton. They were intimate friends but Littleton had been to Congress and White was apt to feel that anything his friend said was pretty high scripture. White was trying a civil case and when it sided up to his friend Littleton and said: 'I feel I shall get this case, brother.'

"Why," Littleton demanded, 'I think I presented the case well and have confidence the jury is going to see it my way.' 'Never bank on your verdict until you get it,' quoth Lawyer Littleton. 'You can never tell what a jury will do.'

The jury came back with a verdict against White's client. In the meantime White had been trying another case and when it was finished and the jury had retired he sided up to his friend Littleton and said: 'I think I am going to get this case.'

"Why," demanded Littleton, 'Well, I have taken more care on this than I did on the other case. I think I presented it to the jury in a very good manner.'

Littleton granted a not very enthusiastic approval, but undaunted, White went on. 'And moreover this was a most intelligent set of jurymen.' In due time the jury came back and declared against White. 'What do you think now?' Littleton demanded. 'This,' lawyer White growled, 'only goes to show how intelligent a set of damned fools can look.'

"I recall a case where a man carried on the greater part of his courtship by mail. He had met and knew the woman for whom he had yearnings of love but she lived in another State and they seldom saw each other. By and by the man proposed by mail and told her if she would sell out her property and come to his town he would go over the formula of 'I promise to love, honor and obey,' with her before a minister. She didn't come at once, doubtless waiting for a rising market before she disposed of her property. And she waited too long—overstaid the time, as it were. The man found another love, and married her. A breach of promise suit followed.

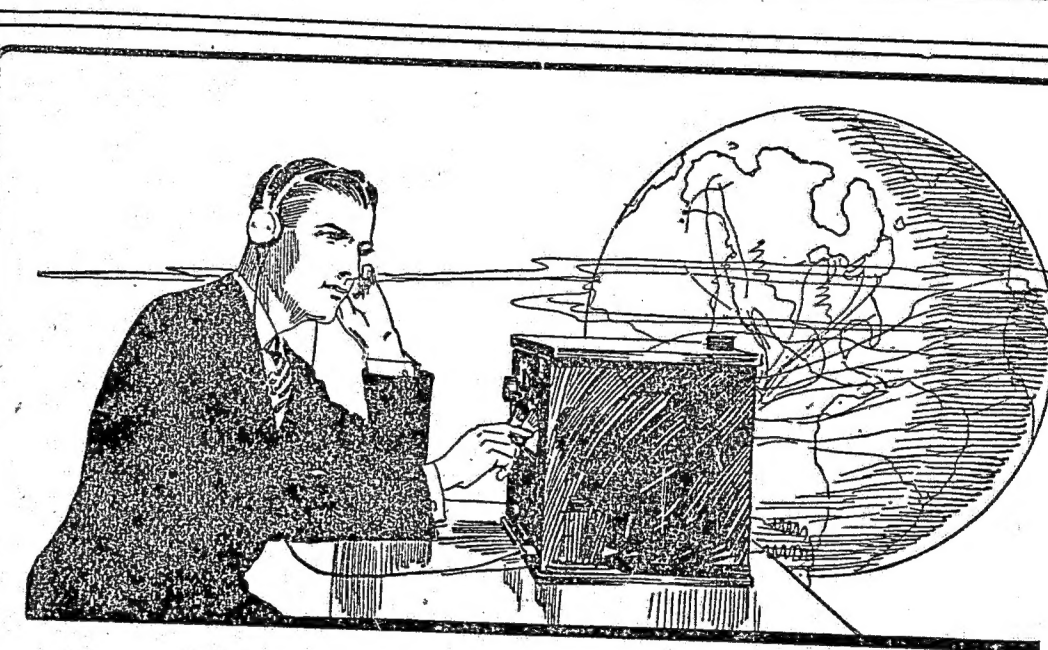

"John P. Swasey handled the case for the woman whose feelings had been trampled upon. Lawyer Swasey and the man he was fighting against had been friends for years and it took more than a breach of promise suit to break up their friendship. When Mr. Swasey pled the witness with questions the man would reply 'yes John' or 'well now, John,' etc.

"This familiarity did not suit the staid old judge. He wanted dignity in the court room and admonished the witness to speak more respectfully to the Honorable Mr. Swasey.

"Well now," said the witness, addressing himself to the judge on the bench, 'you may call him Mr. Swasey, or John P. Swasey or Attorney Swasey—anything you see fit but he will always be John to me.'

"Attorney Swasey won the case and got $800 damages for his fair client. Even that didn't ruffle the man who had married the other woman. He paid the money cheerfully and remarked to Mr. Swasey: 'That's all right, John. I hold nothing agin ye. Between you and me there is more than that difference between the two women.'

Judge Whitman comes from an enviable lineage. He was born in Buckfield, Feb. 6, 1848. His great-grandfather settled in Buckfield after his service in the Continental Army. On his mother's side he is a descendant from Abijah Buck and Micah Foster of Pembroke, Mass., a minute man in the war for Independence. On both sides he is descended from that immortal band who signed "The Compact of Government" in the cabin of the Mayflower. He fitted for college at Hebron Academy and the Bates Latin School. During his long career he has been instrumental in securing some 500 pensions for veterans and dependents of persons who served in the wars of 1865 and 1898. He wrote the history of Buckfield, a book of some 750 pages, in conjunction with Alfred Cole and is about to produce a reliable and authentic history of Norway.

OLD WORN-OUT PASTURES SHOULD BE PUT TO WORK

Hundreds of worn-out pastures in the Northeastern States now growing up to the trailing juniper and other brush are not worth their keep. They are lying idle and not earning their taxes. If these pastures were planted with a good forest tree they would be an asset not only to their owner but to the community at large.

The white pine is pre-eminently the best tree to grow on these upland pastures. It thrives on steep slopes and rocky hillsides as well as on more fertile soils. Idle land is worth little but for a young stand of white pine it becomes increasingly valuable year by year, and has a real sale value.

The presence of the white pine blister rust is no bar to the planting of this tree. This disease can be effectively controlled and the cost of protection is only a small per cent. of the value of the annual growth of the pine. Before planting destroy all wild and cultivated groovy old berries and currants (the alternate hosts or blister rust) on the planting area and for a distance of 600 to 900 feet around it. The Federal government is cooperating with the states in the propagation of the white pine from this disease. Many states are encouraging reforestation by selling white pines and other forest trees at cost.

Get in touch with State Forester D. S. Curtis if you wish to put your worn-out pastures to work to protect your pines from the blister rust.

WHAT SUPERPOWER IS

The electric industry in the United States has had a remarkable growth in every item of importance the past year. Greatly increased use of electrical power in industries and wider application of electricity in the homes is the cause.

Within the last few months the country has begun to feel the "superpower." It is proposed that we burn coal in great central power stations, at the mouth of the mine itself, thus saving useless waste in transportation, useless loss in valuable by-products that amount to many small-scale conversion into power in thousands of furnaces that now waste 80 per cent. of the chemical energy in coal as heat. It is proposed also, that we really water power—now less than ten per cent. developed—hitching them into the great systems fed by burning coal. It is proposed to generate power at its source and ship it along transmission lines, at new voltages which engineers are beginning to command, to interlock the country in a finely-woven copper net. That is "superpower."

With electric power generated by a waterfall in Oregon you can light a reading lamp in Yuma, Arizona. There is a great electric horseshoe in Michigan that links ten of the largest cities in the state; there is a Superpower project underway in eastern section of Ohio; there is a power trunk line of nine hundred miles across the Appalachians that links N. Carolina, S. Carolina, Ala., Penn., and Georgia.

A Superpower system already exists in the Northwest, stretching 1000 miles east and west with 5,000 miles of transmission lines and combined capacity of 500,000 horsepower. In California superpower has for some time been a reality. Every step in this direction means increased advantages for consumers.

THE MIND ITS OWN PLACE

There has been discovered in New York a man 61 years old, who, though born there, never saw the Battery, at the southern end of Manhattan Island, until recently. Now it is reasonable to suppose that a person so lacking in curiosity as not even to have explored his native city during three-score years of residence is it dull-witted and incapable of keen feeling or intelligent interest in the affairs of the world. The person of keen mind and sensitive emotions ordinarily takes advantage of every opportunity that comes his way to travel, to see what is going on in the world, and add to his store of knowledge.

Yet travel is not essential either to the acquisition of a stock of wisdom or to happiness. "One of the profoundest scholars, Immanuel Kant, during a lifetime of 80 years never ventured more than a comparatively few miles away from the town of his birth." And John Milton expressed a great and important truth when he said in "Paradise Lost": "The mind is its own place, and in itself, can make a heaven or hell of itself."

The New Yorker who lived in Manhattan for 61 years before seeing the Battery is probably to be pitied as a dullard. But if he had been restrained by some other consideration than of his lack of interest from visiting that end of the island, yet has had free access to other parts and at the same time were possessed of a vigorous and inquiring mind, it would easily have been possible for him to learn far more about the world and its inhabitants than is learned by globe-trotters.

If he has a good brain and has used it wisely the New York sexagenarian is not to be pitied even if he has been of his own volition a prisoner all his life on Manhattan Island.

Always respect the supposed wisdom of a customer.

COMMON COLDS

The medical division of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has been studying the subject of common colds among the 6,700 clerical employees of the New York home office. As a result several interesting facts have been disclosed, one of them being that this malady, ordinarily thought to be of little or no importance, has its serious economic effects. Moreover, it prepares the way for diseases of which everyone recognizes the gravity. Through this study it was learned that in the twelve months ending with July 1923, a total of 2,842 of these employees had colds that caused disability. This is at the rate of 420.7 colds per 1,000 employees. The average disability per person on the pay roll was 0.9 day and the average per case was 2.2 days. In all 6,233 days were lost for this reason.

Further examination of the record shows that infections of the upper respiratory tracts have two periods of maximum incidence during the year, the first following the advent of cool weather in late summer or early fall, and the second when the coldest weather prevails in January or February. This suggested to the investigators that there are two types of these catarrhal fevers, with the second more likely to be followed by pneumonia and other severe infections. As the colds most often followed changes from warm to cold, this suggested that they could be prevented by proper attention to clothing and by better ventilation of homes, working places and means of transportation.

While such a study as the one reported has its value, there will be a general desire that efforts had been made to learn just what happens when one "catches cold," and just how it happens. Some of the authorities say that too little or too much clothing has nothing to do with colds, as they, the colds, are of a bacterial nature. Undoubtedly they are, but most people know that colds follow a lowering of the body temperature when it affects only a part of the body, and that while the bacteria may be the active agent it gets to work only in what is a seemingly favorable condition. And "after" does not look like "because" when this sequence is invariable. In effect, therefore, though it may not be in theory, it is the draft that causes the cold, that is, when it is not wet feet or some other old-fashioned cause.

However, as colds are generally regarded as unavoidable, and at any rate they are not avoided, it would seem to be highly desirable if the doctors would get busy and find something to cure them, or at least something that would materially shorten their course after they have got a good start. The power to do both is claimed for many things, but the very number of them proves that none is up to the promise made. Taken at the very first, say some, six grains of quinine and an aspirin tablet will do the work—sometimes and for some people, provided they are taken along with some hope and much faith. Let a cold get a firm hold, however, and it must be borne according to the victim's personal temperament. If any person with a cold will go to bed and stay there, recovery will probably be hastened. Few do that, however, so this method of alleviation, if not cure, is seldom tried.

"DEVIL'S GRIP"

Virginia, according to newspaper accounts, has been suffering from an epidemic which some of the victims have called "Devil's Grip." It was reported that there had been 1,000 cases of the disease in that state with three deaths from it in Richmond. From the office of the State Department of Marine to the State Board of Health of Virginia, an enquiry was sent as to whether this disease with a new name was related to the well-known disease which goes under the name of influenza or grip. The reply which came was that it is not the same as influenza, but appears to be a definite entity.

A circular letter sent to physicians in Virginia described the symptoms in brief as: "Acute onset with severe epigastric pain, nausea, extending to one or both sides of the lower portion of the thorax; the pain is very severe and is increased by deep breathing; so respiration is rapid and shallow, rate forty to sixty per minute; an expiratory grunt is frequently observed; there is often tenderness along the attachment of the diaphragm; temperature usually rises promptly and rapidly to 102 or 104, pulse 80 to 100. Patient looks very ill; face is pinched or moderately cyanosed; about one-third of cases have nausea and vomiting; constipation is the rule; abdominal distention is usual with muscular rigidity. After four to twelve hours of severe pain and dyspnea, the patient usually becomes more comfortable; occasionally the pain lasts twenty-four hours. Temperature declines as pain lessens. Some cases have a return of symptoms with decreased severity after an interval of twenty-four hours or more. No deaths are directly traceable to this disease. Children are more frequently attacked than adults."

We were told that an account of the work on this condition up to the 15th of August would be published in the Journal of the American Medical Association for September 1. Physicians may find an account of this unusual epidemic disease on Page 746 of that issue of that Journal.

Water in the home, pumped by electricity, the electric iron, the electric washing machine, vacuum cleaner, range, refrigerator, percolators, curling irons, all of these things are unknown to most farmer's wives and daughters. Electricity will bring them. And, most important of all to the household, will be the advantage of electric lighting."

From that number it was crowded, but still there is always room for one more, that is what some of them thought coming home.

The following day it was rumored that Mr. Tracy scorching the stew, but he must have added some ingredients, known only to himself, to bring back the flavor, certainly it must have been all imagination, for lots were cast for the last oyster.

After supper sliding was in order while the less fortunate ones had the clearing away and cleaning up to do.

FUTURE OF THE RADIO

As everybody knows the radio is still in an experimental stage. To say the least it is further along, comparatively speaking, than was the phonograph in the days of the cylindrical records and brass horns. Even in its present undeveloped state it is still immensely popular for it is a device so entirely different from anything else that people have had to play with, that everybody is attracted to it by its novelty. It is a wonderful thing to be able to sit in a room beside a cosy fire and by twiddling a few knobs be able to pick from the atmosphere songs by famous artists, orchestral programs, lectures and returns from the foot ball games. A person may have owned a radio set for years and still never cease to marvel at the fact that all these various sounds are being carried either and on the wings of the air, as it were, or by stars in heaven, until touching a knob in the right place it is brought to the ears.

But the very best receiving sets are still far from perfect. The tones are not of the best atmospheric conditions make it impossible to get anything on frequent occasions and the tuning in process is more or less of an experiment. It is fun so long as the novelty lasts, but after that has worn off it is quite a common experience that people tire of. More and more people are of course buying radio apparatus but the dealers find that a considerable percentage of the owners do not pay the attention to them that they did.

This is what invariably happens to any toy and the home radio is still little more than that.

As we have said, the number in use is increasing by leaps and bounds, notwithstanding that some are wearying of them. One reason why almost everyone is installing a receiver in his home is the growing cheapness of them. We saw not long ago where a Portland dealer advertised all the parts of a good sized serviceable machine for less than $15.

Of course that meant putting the parts together, but any school boy can learn to do that. Even if one does not dare to take a chance on assembling an instrument, he can get a pretty good one for $50. This is less than the best phonographs cost and much less, when the expense of records is reckoned. It is a quarter what a bicycle used to cost when that device was at the height of its popularity and vastly less than any kind of an automobile can be bought for, even the humblest fiery one.

The mechanical flaws in the radio will, of course, be remedied. The tones will be improved and the tuning out and in process will be made more accurate than at present. But the future of the broadcast is a matter that is giving those interested in the radio business considerable concern. Long and in some cases elaborate programs are being offered each night, which are free to everyone who tunes in for them, but the broadcast is very far from being on a business basis for those who supply these programs are not getting sufficient out of them to be anywhere near commensurate with the expense. Broadcasting must be put on a different basis than at present or soon there'll be none of it and then it will be no more fun to own a radio than to own a telegraph instrument, with no knowledge of the Morse code.

There will always be lectures and speeches, however, especially when they can be used for propaganda purposes and the possibilities of the radio for this kind of thing are almost beyond conception. It is also possible that some will be devised to make possible subscriptions to nightly programs. These are all matters of speculation. All we know now is that the radio is a wonderful novelty and the source of a lot of amusement.—Portland Express.

BLOOD PRESSURE

The life insurance companies have been studying the question of the significance of blood pressure in its relation to health and certain interesting conclusions are set forth in the report of Arthur Hunter, chief actuary of the New York Life Insurance Co. It appears that Mr. Hunter has done no more than examine statistics, but they indicate a definite relation between longevity and blood pressure and blood pressure and diet. It is set down as a fact that for a person in good health a pressure slightly below average is favorable to long life, while the higher the pressure above normal the greater the mortality.

It is announced that a meat diet seems directly to increase pressure. A test on three hundred young women who for several months were allowed to eat no meat reduced their blood pressure to eight points below the average. It is also determined that the high average blood pressure of the people of the United States is exceeded by that of the Australians who consume even more meat than the Americans. The relevancy of the statistics attracted the attention of the insurance company presidents because when the report was read, it being easy to comprehend that Mr. Hunter has opened an engaging toward the prolongation of life simply through a change in the national diet.

Anyone familiar with the country's experience during the war will believe it is impossible to effect such a change in 1917, 1918 and 1919, when meatless days were on the calendar, the average pressure dropped two points below the mark of preceding years. The old average was not fully reached until 1921. Mr. Hunter is careful to explain that the lessening of the meat ration would not lower the efficiency of the secretary worker and that it would probably not effect the physical endurance of the manual laborer.

PROFIT IN RAISING PEAS

Growing peas for canning holds much promise as an industry for Maine farmers, according to investigations which have been made by Percy M. Dow of the State Bureau of Markets. Mr. Dow has been studying this proposition in Unity and in Fryeburg where some farmers undertook this project the past summer, and finds that their average net return was from $35 to $40 per acre, while under most favorable conditions, a net return of $100 per acre was realized.

Pea canning in these two towns was introduced as a side line by the corn canning factories located there, and proved so satisfactory both to the canners and to the growers, that the latter have contracted to plant larger acreage of peas next year.

Mr. Dow believes that pea growing could be made a profitable business anywhere in the State, since pea culture has certain advantages of cultivation, harvesting and freedom from insect pests over sweet corn and some other crops.

Mrs. Martha Holden
Mrs. Martha Andrews, wife of Anson
J. Holden, died suddenly at her home on Pleasant street, about 3 o'clock Tuesday morning from cerebral hemorrhage. Mrs.
Holden had been in unusually good health of late, and her death comes as a great shock to her friends.

Mrs. Holden was born in Hartford 81 years ago, the youngest of seven children of Ellis and Panny Hawkes Andrews. In 1852, the family came to Oxford, where the children were educated at the village schools and at Hebron Academy.

In 1862 the house on Pleasant street was purchased, where Mrs. Holden and her sister Harriet, who passed away last June, have since resided. In 1862 these sisters united with the Methodist church and have since been constant attendants and among its most active members. Except when prevented by illness, they have attended every social and religious affair of the church; also the ladies' aid in which they held office. For more than 60 years they had attended the camp meetings at Emory Grove. For the past several years Mr. and Mrs. Holden have entertained the pastors at their home over Sunday.

Mrs. Holden was a charter member of the T. A. Roberts Woman's Relief Corps, and has held much of the time since its organization. With Mr. Holden who is a member of the T. A. Roberts Post, G.
A. R., she has attended many campfires in surrounding towns and is widely known in that order.

On Jan. 7, 1921, Martha Andrews became the second wife of Mr. Holden. In the death of Mrs. Holden, the church, the Corps and the community have lost a faithful friend. While she was able she assisted in every good work of the community, and exercised her suffrage privilege taking part in every election, as a conscientious republican.

Besides her husband, one sister, Miss Mary Andrews, 86, of Portland, and a step-daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Barker of Norway survive.

LAST Spring a total of 350,000 people were disappointed in not being able to obtain deliveries of Ford Cars and Trucks, as orders were placed faster than cars could be produced.

The demand for Ford Cars and Trucks this Spring will, according to all indications, be far greater than last Spring.

Winter buying has been increasing at a greater rate than ever before.

Actual retail deliveries the past 60 days totaled 308,170 Ford Cars and Trucks, an increase of 1,961, a day over a year ago.

Over 200,000 people have already ordered Ford products on our purchase plan, the majority of whom will take delivery in the Spring.

The above facts are given with the suggestion that you list your order promptly with a Ford dealer if you contemplate the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer and wish to avoid delay in delivery.

South Paris High School is making a new appearance on the basketball map. The school has not been represented by basketball since 1918. The new gymnasium offers a splendid playing surface and activities are to be resumed this winter. Owing to the fact that the floor of the gymnasium is only just completed it has been necessary to shorten the schedule of the teams. There will be a number of practice games during the month of January after which the following schedule for the boys' team will be completed.

Feb. 15 West Paris at West Paris.
Feb. 22 West Paris at West Paris.

BE A TOWN BOOSTER; TELL IT TO THE WORLD

If you like our home town, tell everybody about it. It must be worth liking or you wouldn't like it. And if it is worth liking it is worth talking about. But if you don't like it don't let it stop at that. Go ahead and do something to convert it into a town that you can like. Perhaps the one thing the town needs most may take root in your own brain.

MRS. YOUNG ENTHUSIASTIC

Cannot Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Enough. Sick Women Read This Letter

Charleston, S. C.—"I was completely run-down and not able to do my housework, even washing and ironing, and never felt better in my life. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy enough to get up when I sat down. I read advertisements for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your books and learned about it. I got benefit from the very first bottle. I continued to take it for some time, and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends that the change in my health is due to but one thing and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. ANNIE YOUNG, 16 Amherst St., Charleston, S. C.

The reason for such a letter from Mrs. Young is apparent. She got well and is grateful. Recently a nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made, and 98 out of 100 reported that they received benefit from taking it. Just because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women is a good reason why it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

NORWAY AND VICINITY

NORWAY'S WEARY CLUB

A Maine Town Possession with Nation-Wide Possibilities

By Don C. Seitz and from the Boston Herald, January 12

"During a recent visit to my old home town of Norway, Oxford County, Maine, I discovered a social development abounding in nation-wide possibilities that surely fills a long felt want. This is the Weary Club with headquarters in the Noyes block, in the room where Ben Farrow's barber shop used to be when I was a boy, and right under the loft where Robert Noyes bound books in honest calf-skin and real morocco leather, both, alas, vanished materials in modern binderies. Books are no longer bound in Norway, but the village library 'gives out' about 200 a week to those who care to read them.

It is reported that 75,000 well-to-do Americans now live in Paris because they are unable to loaf comfortably at home, where they must either work or die, inasmuch as our system provides no place for the idler, however well-to-do he may be. Therefore those who cannot, or do not care to, either vegetate and soon pass on, or desperately return to finance or trade.

"The village loafer, however, has no recourse in travel. He is chained to his limitation—the range of Main street, eddying twice a day into the postoffice to wait half an hour for the mail. Here he can exchange views and enjoy brief social contact with his fellows. For the rest of the day his time must be spent at home, where more than likely his wife will want him to do something, or in a drift from store to store. In my youth Jackson Clark's shoe shop was a favorite starting point with the drifters. Jackson was a Democrat, who had reduced personal exertion to its lowest terms. Customers could make their own selections from his stock and pay what they got ready. The next station on the road was Brooks Brothers' store. It was popular in a way. The ancient Elm House was comfortable, but its windows had no outlook, though the porch was comfortable in summer. A drawback was that the pilgrim who started the day at Clark's had to cross a rather wide street to reach it. Besides, most of the leisure ones were Democrats, the period was partisan and Capt. W. W. Whitmarsh, proprietor of the hotel, was a radical Republican. So most of them paused at Whitcomb and Oxnard's store, the next station on the way to the postoffice. John Fitz's candy shop was popular, but it was affected mainly by the younger element, who liked to visit his daughter on the steps if they had overestimated mail time. The Noyes drug store was next to the postoffice, and while an agreeable place, was almost too busy for a comfortable stay.

"The Republicans usually began at Edwin W. Howe's store across the street, in whose dark recesses they tilted against the counter and discussed the Democrats. But here women were always coming in to buy calico or crockery and disturbed the atmosphere. Nobody quite cared to use the office of Beal's Hotel. That was reserved for the general and the higher-ups who were apt to be cool to casuals unless election was near. I present this dreary picture as a foreword.

"In after years the partisan fires died down, the general and his associates were borne, one by one, to Pine Grove Cemetery. So were the kindly store keepers. The Beal's Hotel became democratic and which being newly paved with concrete drew a large amount of 'passing.' The idlers congregated here. The stores had become smart places when rebuilt after the fire and contained no suggestion of hospitality, while local delivery made the postoffice superfluous as a centre. Even the barber shops were too modern for comfort. All went well within in winter and on the piazza in summer, until the jump in the price of coal made it so expensive to warm the hotel in cold weather, that it ate up all the money Bob Seavey, the proprietor, could make in summer. He solved the problem by shutting up shop and hiking for Florida.

"The idlers were agitated at the news. They were politely turned out with no place to go but home and moose and domestic asperities was too much. For a time despair reigned supreme. Then the great mind of Fred W. Sanborn, editor of the Oxford County Advertiser, rose to the emergency and solved the problem for good and all. The rent in the Noyes block was vacant. It had big windows looking out upon Main street from where all the passing could be observed. He rented it at once and organized the Weary Club. Fellow idlers grasped the chance. They were saved, Norway, it may be observed, is next door to Paris. Unfortunately there is no jump in the price of coal made it so expensive to warm the hotel in cold weather, that it ate up all the money Bob Seavey, the proprietor, could make in summer. He solved the problem by shutting up shop and hiking for Florida.

"Each fall the hotel closes down to save coal, but the Weary Ones do not care. Their stove burns wood. This is largely furnished by kind friends. Do not understand that they are idle when in repose. Most of the members write, and each year a great store of straight grained pine and birch finds its way into the back room. It is split to handy size, and keen jack-knives fashion some of it into all sorts of things—wooden chains and anchors and fancy carvings. Much of it goes into straight shavings and these into the stove. Queer branches of trees are stripped of bark and fashioned into grotesque canes, another item of non-fatiguing effort. When members do not whittle they sit and think. Sometimes they just sit. There are no officers and the first man in starts the fire with his own matches.

"No one is obliged to talk unless he feels like it. Membership contains no obligation to be sociable. There fish stories are told, and Truth matches itself bravely against Fiction. But silence or the soft play of the knives on the smooth wood usually prevails. Mindful of the care and responsibility of toting keys, the door is never locked. Everybody can go in or out when they feel like it.

"Besides being a place of refuge for the Weary, the club is a great local convenience. You know where to find a man. Before its establishment there was constant source of doubt. To locate them meant a tedious journey from store to store, with always a chance that they might be somewhere else.

Now the seeker goes straight to the mark. Even their wives know where they are.

"There are 60,000 towns in the United States calling for Weary Clubs. Thousands of them are afflicted with whizzing rotary organizations or other devices of disturbances. Norway alone in this vast galaxy has a Weary Club, a true oasis of peace."

Another Reason Why —

The Buick valve-in-head engine has been recognized for more than twenty years as the most economical and efficient power plant. With its reduced waterjacketing space, more heat is retained in the cylinders and more power is therefore generated.

PUBLICITY FOR MAINE

Business at the State of Maine Publicity Bureau almost doubled in volume over last year, according to a statement issued by Hon. John C. Bates, the executive secretary of the bureau. Last year the number of people who called at the bureau's headquarters for information was approximately 20,000, while this year the number jumped to nearly 40,000. Mr. Bates' statement is as follows: "This year Maine has had the largest tourist business in its history, and this is unquestionably due to the work of the bureau. During the year $23,044.75 was expended for newspaper advertising booklets and maps. Large display ads were inserted in 32 of the leading Sunday newspapers of the country as far west as St. Louis and Kansas City, and as far north as Toronto and Montreal, besides smaller ones in seven of the leading magazines of the country. In all of the newspaper advertisements the bureau was called to the manufacturing, industrial and agricultural resources of the State. Seven independent booklets and maps were issued treating on as many different subjects. "Up to Nov. 1 over 9,000 inquiries, approximately 3,000 more than for all of 1923, had been received by mail, all of which received an immediate answer. At least 100,000 pieces of literature have been given or sent out so far this year. "While no accurate count has been kept of the number of people coming into Portland headquarters for information, a conservative estimate would be between 35,000 and 40,000. Last year the number was approximately 20,000. On August 13, an ordinary day, an accurate count was made, 619 coming in that day, which would probably be a fair average for the day of August. It is the proud boast of the bureau that no person ever sought information on any subject but what it was furnished, or they were advised where to obtain it. "There are 721 subscribers to the bureau, including 41 banks, and four municipalities. "During the year our field agent, Charles D. Kidder, has traveled over 17,000 miles throughout the State explaining the work of the bureau and obtaining first hand information. The success of the bureau is, however, as well, if not better, known outside the State than it is within it. Probably no organization ever made such an impression on the country with such a small expenditure of money. "The bureau has $30,000 subscribed for next year, but it is to be funded properly it must have at least $50,000 for the demands on it are constantly increasing. "From the last of April until the last of August it required the services of 12 people to conduct the work of the Portland headquarters. A supply of literature and maps was sent to the information bureaus of the different transportation companies, automobile clubs, large hotels and tourist agencies east of the Mississippi, and this service should be greatly enlarged. In addition, the bureau had two representatives on the widely advertised Coast to Coast Tour, which covered approximately 10,000 miles by special train in the United States and Canada. Publicity Bureau literature, as well as general Maine literature, was distributed all along the route of the tour. "While no record has been kept of the number of letters sent out, $303.37 has been spent for postage, which should be equivalent to more than 40,000 two cent stamps. "Through the bureau's connections feature articles on Maine have been published in out of the State papers and magazines, and this can be extended. Several out of the State papers have sent special correspondents to investigate the work of the bureau. "The Boston Herald on November 1 in an article on the Publicity Bureau says: 'Out of their efforts grew the Publicity Bureau, supported entirely by private subscriptions, but doing more to build up the State and make the lot of her citizens happier than many an agency endowed by the Legislature.'"

EXPENSIVE EQUIPMENT NOT NECESSARY TO PRODUCE GOOD MILK

Clean, wholesome milk with a low bacteria count can be produced at little extra cost and work. It is not necessary to install high priced equipment and build a model barn to be able to produce milk as pure as a water supply. Good milk can be made in the average barn by using good methods. Methods mean more in milk production than any amount of equipment. If a dairyman uses good methods he cannot help but obtain a good product. Poor methods cannot make good milk with the aid of all the equipment that can be obtained. If a dairyman has a hooded pail, he can keep out considerable dirt and consequently many bacteria; but if he does not properly sterilize this pail he cannot expect to obtain good milk. Without good methods the hooded pail, or other equipment which enhances the production of a clean product, is useless. Modern equipment helps greatly in the production of a better product when properly used. Such devices as the small top pail, the cotton-ped strainer, the aerator, or cooler, the manure carrier and stanchions are designs to save work and help to make the production of good milk easier. But the product containing little sediment and a low bacteria count can be obtained without these labor saving devices. By observing the few principles governing the life of bacteria and how they grow and using effective methods to fight them, the dairyman can, with little equipment, produce the best milk that can be obtained. The best friend the dairyman who wants to produce good milk, can have is the knowledge of clean production, rapid cooling and thorough sterilization.
